History of the Harbour View

The Harbour View Hotel is a Heritage listed building, originally commissioned by George Moon. George was one of Raglan's Old Settlers. Originally from Cornwall, he came to Raglan from New Plymouth in 1842 with his brothers and parents.

George started a grocery business in Whaingaroa village (before the towns' name was changed to Raglan in 1858). He later built the first Harbour View Hotel in 1866, this first building burnt down in 1901. It was replaced in 1903, which also burnt down in 1904.

It was replaced in 1905 by the third and current building we enjoy today.

Prior to major additions in the 1950's (and further renovations in the 2000's), the building has reportedly had many uses over the years. The HVH was a Hotel of course, a Courthouse, Commemoration Accommodation in the early 1900's, and as the years have passed, a Farmers and Fisherman's meeting place. With Raglan being just a short 4 hours by horse from Hamilton, Raglan was considered a resort town destination of the time. Raglan was once known as the "Brighton of the Waikato", and later as "Raglan by the sea". Today, as the hotels' current caretakers, we celebrate her beauty; trusted to pay homage to past and present.

A place of enjoying great food, fabulous music, cold refreshing drinks and good old fashioned hospitality, all in the centre of one of New Zealand's best surfing destinations and a town voted as one of NZ's "Most Liveable Towns". Raglan is a special place, with a rich history, surrounded by natural wonders. The team at the HVH welcome you and yours, as we all continue to be part of the Hotels' historic journey. As we provide our welcoming hospitality, our team trust you have a wonderful time at the Hotel and in Raglan!

From all the team at the Harbour View Hotel
